My mom was a smoker; we always knew she had emphysema and had to have follow up appointments. In late November of 2015, my mom had fallen, breaking bones and requiring surgery. While she was in the hospital, they found a mass - and biopsies lead to the hurtful news of lung cancer. Turns out it was Stage IV and had traveled to her brain, and chemotherapy for her lungs. Being told you have about a year to live is scary, but mom fought to the very end. My mom was a frail 84 pounds but with treatment she gained healthy weight back. One moment we thought her tumors were shrinking and things were going well - and then we were told had a paralyzed diaphragm and was basically living off of one lung. Her battle ended on April 23,3016. My mother was a fighter; she was scared but rarely showed it. Please, if something doesn't feel right, get checked, do research and maybe help others. My mom's death has made me open my eyes and want to know everything possible about this nasty cancer. Media Platforms Design TeamBorn and bred amongst elite Hollywood social circles, Nicole Richie is no stranger to stylish entertaining. And the TV star and multihyphenate considers her home in Laurel Canyon the ideal place for celebrations. "People are in and out of our house every day and night," says Riche. "They come over, take off their shoes, listen to classic rock and eat good food." Unique personal touches help to create the mood for any party, and some of Nicole's favorites, including candles, rugs, flatwear, and holiday decorations, are available for purchase in an upcoming Joss & Main sale event curated by the star. Nicole creates an easy atmosphere with rugs and blankets—laying different rugs on the ground so that quests have room to sit, and keeping white Moroccan wedding blankets within reach in the event that outdoor gatherings get chilly. "I really love the relaxed vibe of friends sitting on the floor, D.L. & Co. (as well as Diptyque) candles burning, and listening to music," she says. Fittingly, Richie names D.L. & Co. (as well as Diptyque) candles burning, and listening to music," she says. Fittingly, Richie names D.L. & Co. (as well as Diptyque) candles as an ideal hostess gift, but is also in favor of a decidedly less formal take. "Listen, I'll take some cash!" says the star, whose unfiltered sense of humor is regularly on display in her AOL show, Candidly Nicole. One thing she's serious about: A plethora of blooms. "Flowers are an important detail for me," she says. "Eric Buterbaugh & Botany do my flowers, and we have them on every table." And we're on board with her pre-party clean-up routine. "There's nothing you can do about these kids' awful, neon toys nowadays," she says. "So I collect vintage trunks and put them anywhere in the house that I can. I let [the kids] run wild during the day and then throw everything into trunks at night. "Nicole's eclectic Joss & Main sale (featuring items seen below) launches on Tuesday, Nov. 12 at 9 p.m. ET on JossandMain.com.Media Platforms Design Team When you visit the site, Dotdash Meredith and its partners may store or retrieve information on your browser, mostly in the form of cookies. So, you want be a cheerleader? Where do you begin? Cheerleading is more than just trying out and being picked for the squad. It's about seeing yourself in a certain way, building physical skills, and presenting yourself in a positive light. It's also about teamwork, memorization, and training. Cheerleading is as much about who you are as what you student. They can be considered a sports participant or a spectator, depending on where they are doing. They are looked up to by many and put down by others. It's not always easy being a cheerleader, but the rewards are many. The skills you learn will not only carry with you throughout your lifetime but will help shape who you are or what you become. Cheerleaders are, by definition, positive people. They are also: physically strong and energetic (it takes a lot of hard physical work to become a cheerleaders are out in front of crowds all the time, and need to project positive confidence in themselves and their team)good team players (cheerleading is all about working together) disciplined (you'll be learning and practicing routines that you must learn by heart) hard-working (you'll be practicing long, hard hours) willing to play by the rules (cheerleading competitions are all about following very specific rules to the letter) able to take constructive criticism (you can only improve if you're able to respond positively to criticism from coaches)eager to learn new things (you'll be learning new moves and cheers all the time) In addition, a good cheerleader must have: a good strong voice for cheeringa healthy lifestyle (eating and sleeping right and avoiding drugs and alcohol are key to being a strong athlete) the ability to manage multiple demands at the same time (cheerleading takes a lot of time and energy, but you must also be able to complete your schoolwork and handle other responsibilities) The road to becoming a cheerleader starts with education. Learn all you can about every part of cheerleading and you'll be off to a good start. Here are some tips for collecting the information you need: Talk to the coach or adviser of the squad you're trying out for and find out the requirements. If possible, talk to current cheerleaders. Attend a performance of the squad you're interested in. Watch them closely and observe their skills and abilities. Get to know the cheerleaders in your school. If you can become friendly with some of the girls, you'll learn more about what it takes to join the squad; at the same time, you'll also have friends eager to support you during tryouts. Watch tryouts. If you're allowed, go to tryouts the year before you plan to try out yourself. Watch to see what the coach is asking for and take notes. If you don't know something, don't be afraid to ask questions. If you'll be cheering for a sport, learn about that sport. Know when to cheer and when not to. Cheerleading is physically demanding; in fact, it can be tougher than some varsity sports. That's because cheerleaders must be as strong and flexible as gymnasts, as graceful as dancers, and have the lung capacity of runners. What's more, while athletes can grimace and sweat, cheerleaders must always have a smile on their faces and look their best. To get in shape, enroll in some classes, or attend a camp or clinic (this might not always be possible as a lot of camps/clinics are for squads only). Check local gyms, recreation departments, and colleges for cheerleading, gymnastics/tumbling, and dance classes to take. Learn as much as you can from sources like books, videos, friends, cheerleaders, and the internet. Take some time every day to practice moves until you feel you're ready.
